Listen Now: Bill Ford on the Masters of Scale Podcast - 1 of 2 Episodes Ford Motor Company executive chair Bill Ford appeared recently on the Masters of Scale podcast with Reid Hoffman. He discussed a variety of topics, from his unusual entry into the family business (did you know that he changed his name and worked on the assembly line in his early years?) to his efforts to drive change at Ford. Also covered were the importance of Michigan Central Station, the rescue of River Rouge, the time he spent as CEO and much more. In fact, the discussion was so robust that Hoffman broke it up into two parts. Listen to Part 1 of Masters of Scale featuring Bill Ford, and check back soon for Part 2.

Ford Manufacturing Engineer Honored by Society of Women Engineers Molli Andor works in Powertrain Manufacturing Engineering supporting programs in Lima, Ohio, where she leads the implementation of new and modified assembly processes for Ford's nano engine, a 2.7/3.0-liter, twinturbocharged V6 used to power trucks and SUVs. She works with a crossfunctional team of engineers, plant employees and suppliers to achieve processes that can run at rate, are ergonomically friendly and have robust designs. Most recently, the team launched 2021 engines for the F-150 and Bronco.

Mid-Michigan Mustang Enthusiast Customizes Son's Power Wheels to Match His Own Mustang Shelby GT500

There may not be a Mustang Shelby GT500 Power Wheels on the market, but one determined mid-Michigan father and owner of a Shelby GT500 has re-created one for his 4-year-old son Reed. Trevor Weslock, of Frankenmuth, Michigan, had a Mustang GT Power Wheels wrapped and decaled to match his own full-size 2022 Mustang Shelby GT500 Heritage Edition, which he took delivery of this week....

An Inspiration for Many, Mike Ackerson Marks 50 Years at Ford Motor Company

April 6 marked Mike Ackerson's 50-year work anniversary with Ford Motor Company. Ackerson has been a valuable asset and team player over the course of his time with the company, living out the values he shares with Ford. The only time he took a day off in five decades was when his second child was born. Ackerson's unparalleled commitment to his work and to his Ford family resonates with the environment he has built around him.

Outside Voices

F-150 Lightning Review: Why It's the Most Important EV Ever Made (Inverse) A pickup truck is the ultimate "but I might" vehicle. But I might need to haul furniture. But I might need to drive to grandma's house while towing an 8,000-lb boat. But I might need to conquer some off-road obstacles. Ford knows all this and knows its truck customers. It's what Built Ford Tough means, and though it's easy to dismiss as a silly marketing slogan, it means something at Ford and they aren't going to put a truck on sale unless it lives up to that billing. Read more »

2022 Ford F-150 Lightning First Drive Review: A True Game-Changer (CNET) The F-Series is the perennial most popular vehicle on the planet. Last year, Ford sold more than 725,000 of the things, and that's despite supply-chain issues and everything else going on in the world. That fact — the sheer significance of this truck's success to Ford's bottom line — made last May's announcement that the company would build an electric F-150 all the more important. The F-150 Lightning had all the potential in the world to be a true mass-market game-changer. Now, less than a year later, the F-150 Lightning is fully in production, and a game-changer it is indeed. Read more »
